Lisbeth Berg-Hansen, Minister of Fisheries and Coastal Affairs, Norway

Lisbeth.Berg-Hansen, both her and family members are also executives to various fishing/fishmeal companies. Norwegian fishmeal contains the synthetic antioxidant ethoxyquin developed and marketed by Monsanto and is a known carcinogen. Further more, dangerous levels of pesticides, which are in widespread use throughout the fish farming industry, are present in the marketed product. Mrs. Berg-Hansen knows about the dangers but has nonetheless been instrumental in passing laws to have their products declared safe. Ministers are supposed to have no outside interests that may compromise their decisions in government but as in so many cases this does occur.

Toxic Norwegian farmed salmon poisons French food relations

TV coverage of the topic “Risks on a Plate” on last Monday night’s “Exhibits” programme on France 3 revealed that most fish meat on the French market does not meet toxicity safety standards.

According to GoodPlanet.info, fish meat becomes potentially toxic because of the pesticides used to combat sea lice, parasites that affect both fish and the environment.

Bruno Le Maire, the Minister of Food, Agriculture and Fishing, who was one of the guests of the show along Dr. Patrice Halimi, Secretary General of the Association for Health and Environment France, declared he was “shocked” by the findings.

He was “revolted” by the fact that fish are given pesticides to eat, especially since “no one knows what damage they can cause to human health,” reports RTLinfo.

Norwegian fish, along with Korean and the Vietnamese, amounts to 70% of French-imported fish for consumption.

French authorities say they’ve already contacted the Norwegians to discuss the matter of pesticide-fed salmon.

“We are waiting for their response. What happened in Norway cannot come to France,” Bertrand Sirven, the ministry’s advisor told the newspaper 20 Minutes.

According to France 3, three journalists volunteered to participate in an experiment devised by Dr. Halimi to test the safety of Norwegian salmon.

The journalists followed an individually-calculated diet of daily food for a few weeks, and reached their conclusions after having been constantly tested at an independent laboratory.

An anonymous salmon farmer has told France 3 how much of the toxic substance he's given his fish, confirming it kills more than just the sea lice. He says he wouldn't have eaten it himself.

Johan Kvalheim, the Norwegian Seafood Export Council's (Eksportutvalget for fisk), confirms he's seen the programme, and was appalled. "I would love to have talked to any Norwegian breeder that's done this," he tells NRK.

Meanwhile, the harmful environmental effects of fish farming have already had repercussions. According to the Norwegian paper Nationen, the US chain of shopping centres, Target, has already pulled out of buying Norwegian salmon, and ICA is considering the same.

And a group calling themselves the "Pure Salmon Campaign", protested against several Norwegian-owned salmon farming facilities off the west coast of Canada under the 2010 Winter Olympics in Vancouver.

Norwegian Minister of Fisheries and Coastal Affairs, Lisbeth Berg-Hansen, who became a millionaire from fish farming herself, confirms she's now been in touch with French authorities. The French programme's allegations have left a bad taste in her mouth.

"Neither banned, nor unauthorised amounts of permitted substances have been found in Norwegian farmed salmon," she says, confirming she eats farmed salmon herself.

Berg-Hansen does admit, however, that salmon farmers do give their fish the type of pesticides mentioned in the French programme, but only when there's no other choice.

"Some fish breeders have used this substance by adding it to their food, but these are harmless to farmed salmon. What has been alarming is that the substances may have affected other species in the salmon's environment."

Subject: RE: EMERGENCY: Stop the wolf killing derby

“All wolves should be eliminated from the lower 48. Remove them by any means necessary. Kill 'em all! A good wolf is a dead wolf.” Recent post from an anti-wolf Facebook page

The wolf killing derby is back – and anti-wolf extremists are thrilled.

This is what we're up against and we need you more than ever.

The only word for this is despicable.

A “hunters’ rights” organization has formally requested permission to hold a multi-year wolf and predator-killing derby in Idaho - on national public lands, including those being studied for designation as wilderness!

If you care about wolves and other predators as much as I do, please help by sending an emergency donation to Defenders of Wildlife – to protect wolves and other imperiled wildlife.

Turning wolf killing into a competitive sport is bad enough. This proposed derby would sweep many types of predators in Idaho into its gun sights, rewarding the killing of coyotes, weasels and others.

Last year’s wolf and coyote-killing derby, sponsored by this same group, included prizes for killing the most coyotes and killing the largest wolf. This is not hunting; this is simply mass-killing for fun based upon hatred and fear. Please support our campaign to stop this killing spree.

The proposed event would take place every winter for five years when wolves and other wildlife are at their most vulnerable - out foraging for food in the snow and extreme cold. These are the kinds of barbaric extermination era tactics that drove wolves to the brink in the first place! This is not modern wildlife management, and it has no place in modern society. Thank you for all you do for the wolves,

Jamie Rappaport Clark, President, Defenders of Wildlife

Reverend Billy & the Stop Shopping Choir

Through the mysterious process of anarchy-consensus, the Stop Shopping Church has two campaigns this year that we will risk arrest for. Save the bees and save the libraries.

For The Bees

We twice invaded the RoboBee laboratory at Harvard University, where the robot bee is being invented. The mechanical pesticide-proof pollinator is desperately needed by the bee-killing Monsanto. But then we discovered that the whole lab was financed through the Pentagon. They want an insect-size drone to spy on us and wage more warfare.

We are now organizing a Great Swarm of the Honey Bees at Monsanto World Headquarters in Saint Louis. Our plan is to avenge the souls of a billion poisoned bees with the buzzy stinging of the Stop Shopping Choir. We have raised 33% of our budget so far.

Will you help us travel to Saint Louis on a veggie powered bus? We will take you to Monsanto World Headquarters with us. After you donate $5 or more, we invite you to send us a momento, photo, bead for our Earthalujahville travelling altar which we will carry with us to Saint Louis.

And The Books?

Under cover of night, the New York Public Library trustees, 1%ers and Bloomberg's billionaires, emptied all 2,000,000 books out of the stacks at the 42nd Street Library and shipped them to New Jersey.

When we arrived at the storage facility, we created a book Stonehenge, a circle of 1,000 of our own books and sang. Each of us held a book in homage to the great books protest at Gezi Park in Istanbul.

Suddenly Savitri, our Director, hustled us into the van, jumped behind the wheel and floored it out of there. What was happening? It turns out that we were in a high security federal zone. The stolen books are sharing this big building complex with the lab where they are developing the H-Bomb! I'm not kidding.

The New York Public Library trustees sent our books to a military installation where the "Plasma Physics Lab" is located. There is a fusion chamber there kept at 20,000 degrees, imitating the interior of the sun! For decades this was known as the "Matterhorn Project," the other foot coming down after the "Manhattan Project."

Earthalujah and Peacealujah!

What was revealed to us is that "Books and Bees" is one issue. We go with our songs, our transformational trespassing - to projects that have great impact on our lives and the lives of our children - and where there is no democracy. These two labs are developing two kinds of bombs, drones and the hydrogen bomb. They cover themselves with humanitarian excuses, but hey, follow the money.

Earth activism is ultimately always Peace activism. We need knowledge and we need our biosphere. We need bees and we need to read. Books and bees! Amen?
