

How We Might Help The Rhino

Rhinos are in trouble like never before. Thugs armed with helicopters are going out at night, shooting them with tranquillizer darts and hacking their horns off with chainsaws and leaving these animals to bleed to death. If things continue the way they are there'll very soon be nothing left.

An idea I've come up with is to place some heated life-sized rhino models in areas where poaching is rife. The helicopters use heat-seeking equipment and these warmed-up models should draw the poachers in to where they could be more easily intercepted.

This is war and it's simply no good pussy-footing around any longer. Actions of the highest order are needed if Rhinos are to have any future at all. Please get in touch anyone and let me know what you think.
